

Salaried workers get theirs back, we should get ours back!

Ford restores raises and benefits for salaried workers only a couple of months after they tried to get hourly workers to take more concessions. It's outrageous and Ford workers have every right to be angry.

But it also should make us even more glad that we voted down the concessions. It shows that everyone who opposed and voted against the concessions was absolutely right. And it proves that those people who tried to shove these concessions down our throat should be ashamed of themselves.

The next step is to talk about how we can get back the raises, bonuses, benefits and all the other concessions that we have given up over the last 5 years.
